Storyboard by Alana Mireles

Stephanie has a busy life as a game developer. When she does have free time, she loves to go shopping either by herself or with friends.

Though Stephanie loves shopping, she has a bad habit of overspending and not knowing how much she's spending while on her shopping sprees.

Stephanie's fiancé, Ethan, has especially noticed her spending habits and how bad it's gotten. So much so, it causes multiple arguments between the pair.

Ethan understands that Stephanie's outings to go out shopping are her downtimes and doesn't want to take that away from her, so he decides to come up with a solution that will benefit the pair.

Ethan remembers an app that a friend told him about that helps track purchases and sets budgets for shopping for anything. Groceries, clothes, toys, and anything that could be thought of. He downloads the app and sits Stephanie down to talk about it.

Ethan tells Stephanie about the app and how she should download it so that she can create a budget for whenever she goes shopping. Stephanie loves the idea and the pair get to work to creating budgets for the both of them.

After a while, Stephanie's habit begins to slow down as she is following the budget and tracking her purchases whenever she goes out shopping. Finally, she can enjoy shopping while being smart with her money.
